The Omega Dominance: A 2011 Perspective

By 2011, Omega had firmly cemented its place as the official watch of James Bond, a partnership that began in 1995 with GoldenEye. This solidified the Omega Seamaster's position not just as a stylish timepiece but as a coveted collector's item. Several Seamaster models held significant appeal in 2011, their prices reflecting their desirability and condition.

Key Omega Seamaster Models and Their Approximate 2011 Prices:

It's crucial to understand that prices in 2011, even for the same model, varied greatly based on condition, box and papers (original packaging and documentation), and specific features. These are rough estimates and should not be considered definitive:

- Omega Seamaster Professional Diver 300M (various iterations): These were, and remain, extremely popular. Prices ranged from around $2,000 to $4,000 depending on the specifics. Models with specific features, like particular dials or bracelets, commanded higher prices.

These were the workhorses of the collection.

- Omega Seamaster Planet Ocean: This sportier sibling to the Diver 300M also enjoyed strong demand. Prices in 2011 typically fell in the range of $3,500 to $6,000+, depending on size, complications (like date or chronograph functions), and materials.
